THE TARIFF DEADLOCK.

Democrats Confident That It Will Not Last Long.

Expressions In Favor of Counting Members Not Voting, but Speaker Crisp Says That Plan Will Not Be Adopted. Talk of Another Caucus-Senate Programme-Committee Work.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The tariff bill will occupy the entire attention of the house during the coming week, or if not the bill itself, then the trouble over the attempt to get it before the house. After four days of fruitless effort last week to pressing treasury deficit. Mr. Wilson secure the presence of a voting Democratic quorum the house adopted just before adjournment Saturday night the extreme expedient of ordering the arrest of all members absent without leave. Deputies were sent out in all directions to serve the warrants on these members. Of the 40 members absent without leave 21 are Democrats and 19 Republicans. As some of them live at long distances they can hardly get here today, and a quorum is therefore doubtful at this writing, although the Democratic leaders express the confident hope that 179 voting Democrats will be in their seats at some stage of the day's proceedings. From the Republican absentees, of course, no aid is expected. They can be brought here under duress, but they cannot be made to vote. This applies to some of the Democrats as well as Republicans, and if the opposition within the ranks of the Democratic majority can be organized, as some of them desire, enough Democratic members might refrain from voting to prevent the consideration of the bill in its present shape. Will Not Follow Reed's Plan.

The possibility of defeating the consideration of the bill causes some of the Democrats, like Colonel Oates of Alabama, to openly advocate a resort to the parliamentary expedient utilized by the Fifty-first congress of counting a quo-rum. Speaker Crisp asserts most posi-tively that they will not be forced to this result. He thinks a quorum will be here certainly on Tuesday at the farthest. If, it cannot be obtained then another Democratic caucus will be called. This is indeed what those who are dissatisfied with the bill are aiming at. They declare that as soon as they can demonstrate that not a sufficient number of Democrats will vote to consider the bill the leaders will be obliged to submit to material modifications. Some of the eastern Democrats who are fighting the income tax proposition are willing to go to almost any lengths to eliminate this feature. Altogether the prospects are good for a very interesting contest.

Mr. Tarsney's Suggestion. Of course, if the quorum is secured today or tomorrow the special order will be passed, modified probably to recompense for the two days lost since the order was reported by lengthening the time of the debate to that extent. Once the debate is under way it will proceed to the exclusion of everything else

Mr. Tarsney of Missouri, a member of the ways and means committee, said last night that if a voting quorum was not secured by tomorrow he would favor the adoption of a rule empowering the speaker to count members to make a quorum. "We must meet revolution with revolution," said he.

If Democratic members are driven to this resort it is believed that the Republicans for self-vindication would be compelled to support it.

SENATE PROGRAMME.

Federal Elections Bill Will Be the Topic Unless Hawaiian Affairs Develop.

Washington, Jan. 8.—The principal item in the senate this week is to be the consideration of the federal elections bill, which is to be taken up tomorrow. This programme, like all other prearrangements, however, is subject to change, but it is believed that it will be practically observed, except in one contingency. It is barely possible that the affairs of Hawaii may again demand the attention of the senate to the exclusion of all other subjects, for at least a por-

If the federal elections bill be taken up it will doubtless give rise to some partisan speeches. While it would seem probable that there will be almost, if not quite, a solid party vote against the repeal of the existing law, there are a to the question to exert themselves to the extent of making speeches against it. The opposition will be led by the New England senators. There is no disposition to push the bill, to the exclusion of other subjects, and for parts of days for two or three eks it may be made a part of the daily programme.

WORK BEFORE COMMITTEES.

Chairmen Expect to Take Up Important

Subjects at an Early Day. Washington, Jan. 8 .- The committee | carr work of the house is not fairly under Sh way, as the difficulty over the tariff has may required all the attention of the leaders who constitute chairmen. Only two reports have been presented since the session opened. But with the prospect that the house will be engaged with speeches on the tariff during the coming week, the committee chairmen are expecting to get their associates together and accomplish considerable work. It is probable that the important bill repealing the 10 per cent tax on state bank issues VOTING QUORUM EXPECTED SOON. the 10 per cent tax on state balls as will be reported at an early day. There is a wide difference of opinion among the Democratic members of the committee as to the principle and detail of such a measure, and as these differences can-not well be reconciled the general desire in the committee is #0 report a bill simply repealing the tax and then let the house decide all differences.

Ways and Means Tasks.

The ways and means committee has two important tasks before it-one the final settlement of the internal revenue feature of the tariff bill, and the other the authorization of bonds to meet the says the bond question will have to wait until the tariff is out of the way. There is little doubt, however, that a bond proposition will emanate from the committee at an early day, as a majority of the Democratic members of the committee are known to be ready to adopt a measure on the lines suggested by Secretary Carlisle in his recent report. There is, however, an energetic minority among the Democratic membership of the committee which does not believe in a bond issue, but prefers the coinage of seigniorage or issuance of notes payable in coin, but these veiws are not likely to receive much consideration.

Tariff Bill Revenue Features. tariff bill will be passed on by the ways details of how the income tax shall be levied and collected. It also remains to be settled whether the internal revenue feature shall be introduced as a part of the tariff bill or as an independent measure. There is very determined opposition, within and without the committee, to making the internal revenue feature, including the income tax, an amendment to the general tariff bill and rushing it through with the prestige which would attach to the tariff branch of the bill.

Republicans Attempt to Decide What Hawalian Course to Pursue, but Conclude to Await Definite News - Impeachment Proceedings Could Not Now Be Brought In the House-The Corwin.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.-A conference was held yesterday afternoon, at which a number of prominent Republicans were present, to decide if possible a course of proceedings by that party in congress on the Hawaiian question, due to the latest advices from Honolulu giving the action of Minister Willis, in which he is reported to have called upon the provisional government to surrender.

It is understood that some very radical views were expressed and that the question of the impeachment of President Cleveland for his course was brought up. This course, however, was not seriously considered by any one, and the cooler headed members advocated a conservative stand. Their views finally prevailed. They argued that it would be much wiser for the Republicans to wait until absolute and definite informa-The internal revenue features of the tion was received from Hawaii, which would probably be not later than and means committee within a day or two, as Messrs. Secretary Gresham has again stated that there was absolutely nothing to be given out on the Hawaiian question and that there would not be until the arrival of mail advices. This would seem to controvert the theory that the president intends to send a special message to congress on the Hawaiian question, including the correspondence received from the Corwin. It is understood now that the dispatches obtained are rather meagre and that the administration pre-fers to wait for full advices before making anything public

The plaintiff states that the defendants each and all of them are members of Funeral Directors' association of Falls City. He states that every under-taker in Jefferson county, Ky., and Floyd and Clark counties, Ind., are members of the association, with the exception of August Lefert, who re on Green strect, between Hancock and Jackson.

It is claimed that the association is conspiracy and confederacy formed for the purpose of extracting unlawful and unreasonable prices and for the purpose of extorting exorbitant prices from the public which is of necessity obliged to call upon them to bury the remains of relatives. Brewster states that this association has what is called a delinquent list, upon which is recorded the names of all persons who may have defaulted in the payment of funeral bills to any one of their members. The plaintiff states that his wife, Susie Brewster, died on Dec. 10. He applied to each of the defendants to furnish burial outfits, but they all refused, owing to the fact that Miller's son notified them that he owed $52 for the burial of his father. He alleges that he does not owe the $52, but offered to give security for it and to pay cash for his wife's foueral. He then ap-plied to the city undertaker, who was unable to furnish him a coffin on account of the trust maintained by the Louisville Coffin company, and he was compelled to use a coffin which had been

It developed that he had been playing cards pretty recklessly, and a story of how he went against a sure thing and lost $2,500 at one sitting cropped out. He was introduced by one George Allen to a stranger at the Merchants' hotel, St. Paul. Allen got out of the game and was to signal to Horton what cards the stranger held, Finally Horton caught a bobtail flush. Allen signaled that the stranger only had a small pair, whereupon Horton drew but one card and proceeded to bluff. The little one was taken into court on a writ of habeas corpus. After a hearing Hanson was given the child and left, as he said, for Buffalo. Beneit was not notified of the proceedings. Now he de clares that the girl is his own daughter Ella, and not Hanson's child; that he never lived with Mrs. Hanson; that he never before heard of Hanson, and that it was his own wife's body which was sent to Buffalo. Benoit says his child has been kidnaped and has requested the Buffalo police to arrest the man. A dis-patch from Buffalo states that no such man as Richard Hanson is known there.

come dull and irksome, the great structure itself appears to possess new charms with every passing day. To the visitor who has never been down in the lower regions of the capitol I would suggest a journey thither at the first opportunity. You will be surprised at the things you find there. You will not expect to encounter steam boilers and engines big enough for a great factory, nor will you think of coming upon a burial vault under the very center of the rotunda.

Scores Upon Scores of Rooms. Suppose you go down first from the senate side. An elevator will show you the way, which you could never find by yourself. At the bottom you will find a sub-basement, largely filled with machinery. Here are elegant bathrooms for the use of senators; also storerooms filled with tons upon tons of public documents, which are rotting away. There are steam boilers and engines, electric lighting machines and a part of the elabsenate wing of the capitol is provided. Still lower down is the floor of the terrace. Underneath the handsome marble structure which surrounds the capitol, save its eastern side, and which was erected purely for architectural effect, much mysterious secrecy. It is said to contain a large supply of fine wines and liquors, the residue of outfits provided for various funeral parties of the past. It is the property of the government and may be used, wholly or in part, whenever another senator dies and a big and jolly committee is sent across country

But when you consider that it must have heat from steam, power for the elevators, electric lights, and that the luxurious body has a constant stream of fresh air pumped into its chamber, this air being warmed in winter by passing through coils of strampipes and cooled in summer by to understand why so many boilers are required that this part of the terrace looks like the hold of a transatlantic been cut. As you walk through the corridor of the terrace you perceive a small glass window, and looking through this you observe a huge fan driven at a high "speed: "It is poised over the brick tunnel which runs out into Capitol park and there emerges in the little stone tunnel and forces it into the senate chamber, where it comes up warmed in winter or cooled in summer from gratings placed under the desks of senators.

Things Run on Forever. Under the house wing of the capitol is another array of boilers and engines. In a room which is grated off like a bank vault, and wherein there must be about is always kept burning in the vault, but no one ever enters it. Not far away in one of the long, low corridors of the subbasement stands a figure which every American takes more or less of a patriotic interest in. It is "Liberty Enlightening the World." This is the model which was sent to congress when an effort was being made to induce that body to appropriate funds for the erection of the pedestal on Bedloe's island, New York harbor. When the model was first sent here, an electric light was put in the hand that holds the torch, and it is a cu-

DOWN IN THE LOWER REGIONS OF in the hand of "Liberty," they can see no reason why they should take it away, notwithstanding the fact that the figure is buried in a dark and remote corridor, A Mysterious Apartment Never Opened to where perhaps no more than a dozen the Public-For Funerals Only-How the people in a week, aside from the capitol employees, ever see it. There is a good deal of continuity in things about the capitol. Once start something going here, and it is likely to run on forever.

For Washington's Remains. An illustration of this is found in the vault under the rotunda, where it was once proposed to place the remains of George Washington. When the capitol was first built and this vault was set apart for that purpose, some one had the good sense to suggest that guards would be needed at such a sacred spot. So guards were employed, and there they, their successors and assigns remained for three-quarters of a century, though there never was anything for them to guard. The wonder is not that they were permitted to remain so long, but that they were ever taken away at all. This old vault is one of the most interesting places in the capitol. Not many visitors know of its existence, nor, for that matter, but few of the senators and representatives. By application to the office of the architect of the capitol, near by, the key to the vault may be procured. This room has heavy walls of brick and ceiling of iron and masonry. It is 20 feet long and about 16 feet wide and is lighted by a single gasjet. A gloomy, somber, almost grewsome place it is, suggestive of prison or tomb. Here it was once supposed the remains of Washington would be placed, and it has never been satisfactorily explained why they were not. It is the common belief that Mrs. Washington declined to give her consent to the removal of the remains of her husband from Mount Vernon, but this is not the case.

I have looked up the records and learned that a few days after the death of General Washington congress adopted a joint resolution in which it was provided that "a - marble monument be erected by the United States in the capitol, and that the family of General body to be deposited under it, and the monument be so designed as to commemorate the great events of his military and political life."

Martha Washington's Letter. The president was directed to transmit this resolution to Mrs. Washington with appropriate expressions of condolence, and entreating her to accede to the request. This was done by President Adams, and Mrs. Washington replied

Mount Vernon, Dec. 31, 1799.
Sitt-While I feel with keenest anguish the late dispensation of divine Providence, I cannot be insensible to the mournful tributes of not be insensible to the mournful tributes of respect and veneration which are paid to the memory of my dear deceased husband, and as his best services and most anxious wishes were aways devoted to the welfare and happiness of his country to know that they were truly appreciated and gratefully remembered affords no inconsiderable consolation. Taught by the great example which I have so long had before my private wishes by the great example which I have so long had before me never to oppose my private wishes to the public will, I must consent to the request made by congress, which you have had the goodness to transmit to me, and in doing this I need not, I cannot, say what a sacrifice of individual feeling I make to a sense of public duty.

MARTHA WASHINGTON.

No National Tomb.

It does not appear in the records that Mrs. Washington ever formally withdrew this permission or changed her decision as to the burial of the remains of the first president. But, in sending her letter to congress President Adams delicately called attention to her expressions, and said, "There can be no doubt that the nation at large, as well as all branches of the government, will be highly gratified by any arrangement which may diminish the sacrifices she makes of her individual feeling." It appears that the congress as well as the country accepted this as the best solution of the matter, and the movements

remove the remains of Washington from Mount Vernon was never more heard of. Recently a proposition has been made to remove the remains of both Washington and Lincoln from the tombs in which they now repose to this vault under the great dome and to make this national tomb some such mecca for the pil e of the patriotic as the tomb of Napoleon now is in the Church of the Invalides, Paris. But it is safe to say this will never be done. It should not be done, for the reason that a befitting tomb could not be constructed for no other. There is neither the space nor the opportunity for architectural embellishment. It would always be dingy, ugly, stuffy and unpleasant, and anything but a worthy imitation of that most magnificent of all tombs-the one in which rests Napoleon. WALTER WELLMAN.
